

Statement of Employment

History of Previous Employment

To work successfully as a scaffolding inspector, a scaffolding inspector needs to have sufficient practical experience in order to complete inspections of complex scaffolding properly and safely. Next to this practical experience, thorough theoretical knowledge of the scaffolding field is essential, including the related risks, safety precautions and standards. In the past candidates with too little experience or knowledge have tried to register for the exam of Scaffolding Inspector. The DNV warrant committee WMVWH, which includes the certification scheme Scaffolding Inspector, made an announcement in the meeting of 27 march 2008 after several corporate parties expressed concerns, on the practical experience needed in order to be certified as Scaffolding Inspector. Now candidates with too little experience or knowledge do not meet the standards established for certification.

Below is the text found in the announcement:

- The potential Scaffolding Inspector has to prove, by means of a statement signed by themselves and the company (including a company stamp) that he or she has at least five years of practical working experience in scaffolding as a supervisor.
- It is not possible to receive dispensation by means of a level assessment from this statement.
- DNV will, before issuing the certificate, check to see whether the statements are present and request that working experience be satisfactorily proven from a sample chosen at random. If the stated working experience cannot be properly backed up, DNV will not issue a certificate. If the candidate does pass the theoretical exam, proof of participation may be requested until such a time that working experience is sufficient for certification.

The candidates state:
